For the history of Romania, the completion of the unitary national State through the acts of self-determination of 1918 that occurred in Chisinau, Cernuti and Alba Iulia and whose centenary we celebrate this year, represents the most important event and signifies the fulfillment of the ideal of living freely in an independent State to include among them all Romanians. In this context, considering the common historical origins of Romania and Italy, as well as the vision they share about the need to develop bilateral relations, in which economic exchanges have a substantial share, the two states have stepped up in the 21st Century knowing and cherishing their common history, promoting a culture of memory capable of honoring the forerunners, but also a source of lessons on which the future can be built on unanimously recognized principles. With this thought in mind, the theme of the current issue of the Cross-Border Journal for International Studies is dedicated to "Romania and Italy. The common memory culture of the past 100 years - Memory and identity in the Romanian-Italian dialogue: symbolic spaces, legal, historical and philosophical aspects".
